THE HALTERMAN MURDER A FRATRICIDE

THE MARK OF CAIN ON BROTHER WHO CONFESSES TO THE KILLING

Slayer Tells How He Called Sheriff To the Scene and Tried To Establish Alibi— Killed His Brother Near Hen House— Victim's Wife Heard Shots and Came To Her Husband's Rescue and She Was Clubbed To Death.

Leo Halterman, 26, Monday night confessed he shot and killed his brother, Charles Halterman, and then beat the latter's wife to death with the end of a shotgun at the Charles Halterman farm near South Solon, last week.

The confession was made at 10:30 Monday night in the county jail to the county prosecutor, Ray Maddox, Sheriff R. S. Ramsey and Detective Ora Slater of Cincinnati. Slater arrived in Washington C. H., late Monday afternoon to take part in the case.

Halterman told his questioners he killed his brother because of family difficulties. Charles, he said, had kept him from becoming reconciled with his (Leo's) wife, who has not been living with him for the past year.

Relating the details of the slaying, Leo said he killed his brother near the henhouse in the early morning, shortly after they had gone out to do the chores.

His sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Halterman, then came running out, having heard the shots, and he beat her to death with the gun, using the barrel end to hit her. He did not use a hatchet, he said. Afterwards he took the weapon to an abandoned well not far from the house, threw the weapon in and then called the sheriff.

No announcement was made after the confession was obtained as to what procedure the authorities would take, but Prosecutor Maddox announced several days ago that if a confession was obtained in the case he would ask the grand jury be called immediately.

Halterman was taken into custody a short time after the slaying. His previous story was that he was awakened from his sleep by a shot in the yard and, investigating, found the bodies of his brother and sister-in-law. On his information Sam Satterfield formerly employed on the Halterman farm, was arrested and questioned but was released.

Leo Halterman had been living with his brother about a year following the separation from his wife. Mrs. Leo Halterman is living in Scioto county, with their year-old baby. Their other two children, 3 year old twins, were living with their father at the Charles Halterman farm. Mrs. Leo Halterman took them back to her Scioto county home Monday after the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Halterman.

Sam Satterfield, who has been held in the county jail at Washington since shortly after the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Halterman of South Solon last week, was released by county authorities Monday. They declared suspicion has been diverted from Satterfield and has centered on another person, whose identity they declined to divulge.

The couple was slain early one morning when they went to investigate noises in their chicken yard. Mr. Halterman was shot to death with his own shotgun, while his wife was hacked to death with a hatchet.

Leo Halterman, a brother of Charles who was living with his brother, and who was taken into custody several days ago for questioning, was still held in the county jail. He declares he was awakened from his sleep by a shot in the yard of the Halterman home, and, investigating, found the bodies of his brother and sister-in-law.

Satterfield was formerly employed on the Halterman farm but was dismissed some time ago for intoxication. At the time of his arrest it was believed that he had been heard to make threats of vengeance against Charles Halterman.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Columbus—Herbert Russell Harrington, president of the First National bank at Logan, died here at the home of his mother, Mrs. Frank Harrington. He had been in ill health for the past 18 months.

Cincinnati — Armin Cross, Cleveland, former head of the Reimer-Cross company, a bankrupt concern of Cleveland, filed an appeal in the United States circuit court of appeals to a sentence of 12 months in the Atlanta penitentiary. The sentence was imposed on charges of concealing assets valued at $10,000 from the trustee in bankruptcy.

Lisbon — Ouster proceedings have been filed in common pleas court against Mayor W. L. Foge, of Wells-ville, who is serving his fourth term. In the petition submitted to the court which was signed by 417 citizens there were ten charges including one that he had been running the affairs of the city with a high hand.

New Philadelphia — Bert McMillan was required to kiss his wife and apologize to her after Mayor W. F. Hurst had fined him $15 for being disorderly at his home on Christmas day. Police Chief Gintz accompanied McMillan home to see that the orders were obeyed.

Columbus — Sentence of Arthur Brannon, 20, Hominy, Oklahoma, convicted of manslaughter in the killing of Tony Colusi while both were serving terms in the federal reformatory at Chillicothe, was reduced by Judge Hough from seven years in Leavenworth to four years. Reduction in sentence was made following discovery of additional facts which were placed before Judge Hough.

Urbana—Mrs. Abraham Reams, 25, was instantly killed and Mrs. William Coleschott, 17, of Bellfontaine, died in Champaign county hospital as the result of a coal oil explosion in Reams home eight miles north of Urbana.

Coleschott was slightly burned and Reams escaped uninjured. The party had returned from a shopping trip to West Liberty. Mrs. Reams placed some kindling in a stove to start a fire and poured coal oil on the wood. Live embers in the stove ignited the oil and the explosion followed.

C. A. C. CLUB DEFEATED BY MENDEL TEAM

Tailors Sewed Up the Circleville Boys to the Tune of 25 to 19.

In a very hotly contested and interesting game the C. A. C. boys went down before the Mendel Tailors' squad to the tune of 25 to 19 at the C. A. C. gym Christmas night.

Altho outplaying their opponents on the floor thruout the contest, the local boys were unable to connect accurately with the basket and being a little weak on the take-off resulted in their defeat. It was one of those games wherein the best team lost and to prove this the boys are going to meet the Tailors in the latter part of January. It can truthfully be said that the C. A. C. had fifty per cent more shots than the visitors many of which were those kind that take the pep out of a fellow.

The Mendel Tailors cannot be considered lightly. They have a fast aggressive team, much larger than the home boys, yet not having the staying powers and they should have been easy prey for them. But the score says differently and brings to mind the verse:

"For when the one great scorer comes To write against your name He writes not that you won or lost But how you played the game."

Carrying out a tradition that has been set the C. A. C. will have as their opponents, New Year's night St. Xavier college of Cincinnati. This is the fifth year for their appearance on this court on New Year's night and they have always taken home the bacon. This year the C. A. C. boys are determined to turn the tables. Regardless however of the outcome of the game it is sure to be another one of those games with a thrill a minute.

LOANS TO VETERANS.

Brigadier General Frank T. Hines, director of the U. S. Veterans Bureau announces that during the year, 1927, veterans can borrow on their adjusted service certificates at the rate of 8½ cents for each dollar of the face value of the certificate.

The important point for the veterans to remember is that the law permits these loans to be made only by National banks, or any bank or Trust company incorporated under the laws of the state, territory, possession, or the District of Columbia and not by any other corporations or individuals. Banks will naturally require veterans to identify themselves before loans can be made.

FUNERAL OF FRANCIS B. LOWE.

The funeral of the late Francis B. Lowe will be held at St. Philip's Episcopal church Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. David McDonald, of Lancaster, will officiate.

The pallbearers will be members of Motor Transport company No. 145. The deceased was formerly a member of this company.

Friends of the family who desire to call to view the remains can do so at any time as the casket will not be opened at the church. A firing squad detachment from Ft. Hayes U. S. A., will be present to do honors for their comrade at the interment.

Cooled by Evaporation

The desert cooler or olla is a native product of the Southwest. It consists of a porous earthenware jar which holds from five to ten gallons of water. It is hung in the sun and the rapid evaporation, which is the result of the porous material of the jar, keeps the water cold.

TWO FEDERAL CONVICTS TAKE FRENCH LEAVE

Pair Catwalks Along Icy Coping at Federal Building to Freedom.

If pedestrians hurrying into the postoffice at dusk Monday had looked up at the fourth floor windows, they would have seen two men, who had just heard themselves sentenced to terms in Atlanta penitentiary, engineer an escape worthy of Gerald Chapman.

Climbing thru the window of a toilet, they catwalked along an icy balustrade just underneath the coping for 125 feet, opened another window and calmly walked down three flights of stairs with deputies, marshals, witnesses and officials from the closing U. S. court session, all around them.

Where they went as they passed from the building, one of them bare-headed, U. S. marshals and police wondered. No trace had been found of them late Monday night.

One of the men, Herbert Smith, alias J. A. Williams, sometimes habitue of Missouri state prison, Chester, Illinois, prison and Michigan state prison, had been sentenced earlier in the day by Judge Benson W. Hough to five years in Atlanta for transportation of stolen autos.

The other, James D. Reedy, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, faced a term of two and a half years, also pronounced on him Monday by Judge Hough.

With 50 others they were in a room on the fourth floor of the building guarded by a deputy marshal inside, while other deputies were stationed in the corridor outside.

The pair asked their guard if they might enter the adjoining toilet. There they locked the door. When they failed to reappear in a few moments the officer tried the door, summoned U. S. Marshal Stanley Borthwick and others and the transton was broken.

Inside, a window, eight feet high on the wall, stood mockingly open. Outside it, stretched the precarious passageway along which the men had walked.

The marshal raced down the corridor. At the end is an old pension office, used by agents of the narcotic division. A scrub woman remembered two men leaving the office a few minutes before. The window inside was open, revealing the route of the escape.

Marshal Borthwick said he had no blame to place. He declined to reveal the name of the deputy who permitted the men to enter the toilet lest it be taken as a reflection on him.

Bertillon descriptions of the men were sent broadcast. Smith is 38 years old, weighs 147 pounds and is of medium build. His hair is chestnut, graying at the edges and his eyes, greenish gray.

Reedy, 29 years old, weighs 169 pounds and is five feet, nine inches tall. He has dark brown hair and brown eyes.

Brahman-Cross Steers Favored

Especially Adapted to Hot Climate, Droughts and Cattle Pests.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For a number of years cattlemen of the Gulf coast region have been using Brahman—the so-called sacred cattle of India—to cross with the common beef breeds of this country. Brahman are especially adapted to a country having a hot climate, droughts, and where cattle pests are common. Native cattle carrying as little as one-eighth Brahman blood exhibit these same characteristics to a large degree and are in many ways more suitable for the conditions of the Gulf coast region in Texas than native cattle. Brahman-crossbred cattle are becoming quite widely distributed in this section.

Experiment With Cross.

The United States Department of Agriculture is experimenting with Brahman crosses to determine how they compare with other beef breeds in the Gulf coast region. Breeders producing Brahman crosses are meeting with success. This is particularly true of the young stock which weighs more at the same age and sells as high as calves of the ordinary beef breeds raised in that section. They are in good demand for veal in the markets serving this region.

Sold In North.

While considerable number of Brahman-cross cattle are marketed in Texas, shipments occasionally reach northern markets. Twenty-four head of two-year-old steers carrying one-eighth to one-quarter Brahman blood recently were sold on the Jersey city market where they not only created considerable curiosity but were well received by buyers. This carload was part of a shipment made by one of the largest ranches in Texas to several markets in an endeavor to introduce them to the packers. According to reports to the department the 24 head dressed an average of 59.17 per cent, which is considered as very satisfactory. They were fed cottonseed cake on grass pasture throughout the summer and fall.

Find Poor Lettuce Seed

Expensive at Any Price

The importance of good lettuce seed cannot be too strongly emphasized. Poor seed is expensive at any price and the grower is not justified in buying it in order to save a small difference in cost.

It is not unusual for lettuce growers to be able to cut only 50 per cent or less of their crop. This, to a large extent, is due to many plants going to seed before developing a head. Much of the failure to head can be traced directly to bad seed. Growing conditions and cultural methods are as important in the growing of lettuce as in growing other vegetables, but will not produce a good crop of heads unless the best of seed is planted. For the last two seasons good lettuce seed has been scarce and, as a result, a lot of seed of inferior quality has been sold. A large percentage of some strains of seed being offered to the growers will not produce firm heads except under the most favorable growing conditions. Some of these strains contain a rather large percentage of seed which will produce nothing but "seeders" under any conditions.

Overhauling Tractor Is

Proper Job for Winter

What are some of the main things to check up when overhauling a tractor?

The ignition system, the oil pump if the tractor has one, valves, pistons and rings, bearings, gears and carburetor should be examined and fixed if necessary.

These things should be considered by every tractor owner during the winter months when the tractor is ordinarily idle. Time spent in overhauling the tractor this winter may mean time and money saved next spring and summer when most farmers can ill afford to neglect farm work long enough to make tractor repairs.

If your tractor has a high-tension magneto that has been working all right leave it alone. However, if something is wrong with the magneto it is not advisable for anyone but a good mechanic to try to do much with it.

The oiling system should be gone over. There is nothing more necessary than plenty of good oil to prevent wear and to keep the tractor in running order.

FARM NOTES

Crop rotation is the beginning of organized or business farming.

Alfalfa will grow on sand. That has been demonstrated through many successes and some failures.

If manure is hauled out and spread daily during the winter months, it saves double work in the spring.

As a pasture crop and as a soil enricher sweet clover, without doubt, heads the list of leguminous plants.

Thoroughly cleaned clover and alfalfa seed means not only fewer weeds, but lessens likelihood of parasitic plant diseases.

AMAZON FOR-ESTS WILL LAST MILLION YEARS

Skipper of "City of Nome" Says Interior Abounds With Hardwood Timber.

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 26.—Native villages in the deep jungles near the Amazon river are safer than Chicago, according to Capt. A. H. Moore, skipper of the "City of Nome," which docked here the other day after one of the longest cruises on record.

Inability to buy proper fuel in the South American ports caused a voyage lasting 448 days and prompted a report that the ship had been lost.

For days the ship was anchored in the Amazon, loading precious Brazilian hardwood, Spanish cedar and mahogany logs. Although 400 miles up the Amazon river in the dense equatorial underbrush, none of the crew carried a gun and none were harmed. And this despite the fact that the jungle teems with wild animals and savage tribes abound, Captain Moore explained.

Fears of future lumber shortage were deprecated by the skipper of the adventurous "Nome." "There is enough hardwood timber in the Amazon country," he said to last 1,000,000 years.

Running low on fuel, the ship stocked up with an asphaltic substitute for oil. This substance, however, was too heavy and choked the engines, and with only one good engine available the "Nome" limped up the west coast of South America. The ship's one good "lung" finally collapsed at Salina Cruz, Mexico, and the remainder of the voyage was made under power by the tug.

FORD GETS NOVEL VIOLIN

Instrument, Made By Mexican Indian With Jack Knife, Said To Have Good Tone.

Wichita, Kans., Dec. 23.—A violin made by a Tarahumara Mexican Indian, who had for his only tool a crude jack knife, has been sent to Henry Ford for his collection. The instrument was forwarded for the Indian by W. L. Churchill, chief engineer of Orient railroad.

Even the carving on the violin was done with the knife. One of the four strings is of steel, the other three of catgut. Experts have said the instrument has an unusually fine tone. The parts are fastened together with twine.

The Tarahumara Indians inhabit the mountain fastnesses of Chihuahua, along the Orient lines in Mexico. There are about 800 members of the tribe who make a living milking goats, cultivating corn and making blankets, pottery and musical instruments.

FORD IS CHALLENGED

To Prove That Jews Control Federal Reserve System.

Washington, Dec. 27.—Silence of Henry Ford since he charged that the Federal Reserve System is controlled by international Jews today brought a demand from Representative Sol Bloom, New York, Democrat, that the manufacturer either must submit proof or confess "that you have charged more than you can substantiate."

In a letter to Mr. Ford the New York Representative reiterated that if there were facts behind the charge Ford as "chronicler of the neglected truth," owes it to his own reputation to present them to Congress.

Bloom already has introduced a resolution asking for a select congressional committee to investigate Ford's charges and also has asked the Rules Committee to invite Ford to appear before it to determine whether or not early consideration of the resolution by the House is justified.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK

CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO

"The Bank That Makes You Feel At Home."

Draped Sleeves Feature Attractive Sports Dress

Mary Astor, prominent motion picture actress, wearing a chiffon taffeta sports dress. The graceful manner in which the sleeves of this outfit drape is the outstanding feature.

Interesting Vestee Will Enliven the Costume

The blue cloth-tailored dress enlivened with vestee of satin, silk faille, or rep in odd shapes, and with novel trimming, is conspicuous in a group of imports. These dresses are straightlined, with pinch bloused backs and cluster plaits in the skirt to vary the silhouette. Some boleros are included, as well as frocks in which boleros are suggested by the lines in which the trimming is applied.

The interest of these models is centered in the vestee, which introduces unusual shades, frequently green or yellow, into the costume, as well as a contrast in fabric. Metal thread embroidery in distinctive geometrical patterns that contribute to the tailored effect is employed frequently to embellish the vestee, and diminutive metal appliques also are used for trimming. In one dress the trimming consists of columns of small metal squares, each unit being stitched with a cross of contrasting color. Some of the vestees give the effect of jackets closing in decorative buttons and loops.

Several ensembles for afternoon wear are shown with the dresses of flat crepe and the coats of kasha trimmed with fur. Two tones of the same color are used in the dress, in many cases with the lighter shade repeated in the coat lining.

Black is emphasized in afternoon dresses of the more formal type, relieved usually by jabots or narrow bandings in contrasting color. In one example, of black canton, heliotrope and mauve are used in the jabot and in two narrow bands encircling the hem. Lace is combined with black velvet in many dresses, and usually comprises the lower half of the sleeve.

Chiffon is given place in another group as the medium for evening wear, and most of the frocks shown are of the soft, fluttering type best expressed in this fabric. Velvet is combined with the chiffon in many instances, appearing in the lower part of the bodice and the upper part of the skirt. Fringe and rhinestones are emphasized for trimming, the fringe being used to form an overskirt rather than in isolated strands. In some of the velvet and chiffon dance frocks the rhinestones stud the velvet bodice and are veiled by a layer of chiffon with crossed surplice lines.

Sponging Costume Will Make It Look Fresh, New

An occasional sponging of one's costume will enable it to keep its freshness a great deal longer than it otherwise would.

First brush the garment well and empty all pockets free from dust. Have a small bottle of gasoline, a cupful of clean water, and a woolly rag the color of the article to be cleaned.

Place a blotter or cotton pad under each portion worked on to catch any grease that is dissolved and rubbed through. The gasoline is a solvent for all grease and oil spots and will brighten any portion of the garment that it is laid upon. The water will dissolve any sweet and starchy stains. Work over the entire garment carefully with these two solvents. When completed hang out in the open air, on a sunny day if possible, to deodorize. Then press in the usual manner.

Many cleaners work over the whole article with gasoline, then dry and work all over again with water.

Decorated Skirts

The tiered and ruffled skirt gains in favor daily. For evening there are many attractive lace frocks, the skirts composed entirely of lace ruffles.

Night Parachute Jump Saved Pilot From This

When Charles E. Lindbergh, aviator in charge of a United States mail plane, enroute from St. Louis to Chicago, ran out of gasoline at night, midway on his journey, he was compelled to abandon his machine and leap to safety in a parachute, dropping 13,000 feet, setting a new night record in altitude for such a jump. The wreck of his fallen plane is shown here.

MOTOR DRIVEN MACHINERY IS LOW IN PRICE

Ohio Farmers Can Buy Truck
For Sixty Per Cent of Cost Six Years Ago.

Motor driven farm machinery is almost all cheaper than it was before the war, according to figures compiled by the departments of rural economics
at the Ohio State university and the Ohio Experiment station for the past six years.

Ohio farmers can buy a truck for six-tenths the price they could six years ago. Gas engines and tractors have also become cheaper since 1920.
Horse-drawn plows have about doubled in price and tractor plows
have increased over one-fifth in price.
Double disks for four horses have made the largest increase with 216
per cent.

Excluding gas driven machines,
farm machinery prices are 1.67 times
as great as in 1914. Assuming that 30 per cent of the machinery cost on Ohio
farms is for gas-driven machinery, J.
L. Falconer, head of rural economics
at the Ohio State university and the Ohio Experiment station, points out that machinery costs to Ohio farmers are reduced to 1.38 times the price in 1914.

Feed prices have also been relatively cheap the past few years. This has been largely beneficial to the farmers in eastern Ohio where the deficit of feed makes it necessary to purchase on the market. Fifteen per cent of the total farm expenses in Ohio are paid out for feed.

Feed has been the lowest farm expense for the past five years, comparatively. Bran, oats and cottonseed meal have ranged relatively low in price. Tankage has been and is still high compared to the price in 1914.

man gets his greatest joy out of real achievement.—Charles M. Schwab.

SMITHSONIAN GETS VALUABLE MINERALS

Rare Collection Is Left by Frederick Canfield.

Washington.—The Frederick Can-
field collection of minerals, among the largest and most complete private collections in this country, accompanied by an endowment of $50,000 to be used for its increase, has been given to the Smithsonian institution. This very important legacy has already arrived safely in Washington. It required a month for experts from the national museum to pack the eight or nine thousand specimens contained in the collection in 117 cases. Some months more will be required for unpacking and cataloging before the minerals can be put on exhibition.

Frederick Alexander Canfield of Ferro Monte on Mine hill, N. J., who died last July, was the donor of the collection. He made extensive researches into the fate of mineral collections in America, the results of which he published, before selecting the Smithsonian institution as the legatee to which he was willing to in-trust his beloved mineral specimens.

The collection is in two sections.
The older section was gathered by Doctor Canfield's father some time before the middle of the last century. It contains many specimens found early in the history of this country in mines
which have long since shut down, specimens from which are, consequently, no longer available. Among the more important of these are minerals obtained from Franklin furnace, New Jersey, an area which has produced more new species than any other in America. The elder Mr. Canfield had first-hand access to the mines of this area and the representative minerals he collected from it are the finest in the world.

Son Adds to Collection.

When his father died Frederick Canfield sealed the thousand or so specimens his father had collected in cases, which had never been opened until their transfer to the Smithsonian. The son began his own collection, which constitutes the second section of the legacy. Its value is as great and equally unique, and is the result of the expert discretion with which the younger Canfield, himself a mining engineer, used his means to gather mineral specimens from all parts of the world. The collection could not possibly be duplicated and it would take years of intensive work
to build up anything that would rival it.

Among the rarities contained in this second section is the type specimen of the mineral canfieldite, named after Doctor Canfield. In fact, the collection contains almost all the specimens
of this mineral known in the world.
Of the related mineral, argyrodite,
rich in the rare metal germanium,
Doctor Canfield had the largest masses known.

The Canfield family has been associated with mining interests in New Jersey for more than a century. Frederick Canfield, the elder, was one of the heirs of Governor Dickerson of New Jersey, founder of the Dickerson-Suckasunny Mining company, a once great iron mine, which is now a picturesque ruin. His son, who was born in 1849, inherited his property and his mineralogical leanings. Educated at Rutgers and Columbia, he took a degree in mining and engineering in 1873.

Discovers Rare Fossil Plants.

Pursuing his profession in North and South America, the younger Can-field spent two years in Bolivia and in 1886 he discovered the fossil plants which fixed the geological age of the far-famed mountain of silver, Cerro
de Potosi.

During the last several years of his life Doctor Canfield lived a quiet, retired life in the family home of Ferro Monte, devoting himself to the care and increase of his mineralogical collection, to his hobby of history and to the companionship of his live stock.
Like his two brothers and one sister,
he died unwed and he left no near relatives.

The Canfield collection brings to the Smithsonian institution many species of minerals not previously represented
there, besides better examples of much that was represented. The endowment of $50,000 greatly increases the permanent value of the collection, for it will permit constant additions to be made to it as occasion offers.

Apart from the obvious display value of the minerals, mineralogists of the Smithsonian institution and of the country will find them invaluable for research purposes. From the practical point of view the importance of mineral collections was thoroughly demonstrated during the war when constant requisitions were made on the Smithsonian collections for specimens to be used for experimenting purposes in the development of new appliances. The Smithsonian is, of course, concerned with pure research, that is, the making known of basic facts about minerals. But without knowledge of these facts the minerals cannot be used in applied science.

Life's Span Grows

Washington.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley thinks that science within a quarter-century will add three to four years to the average span of life in this country. The doctor seems to have a recipe of his own, however. On his eighty-second birthday he walked to work, as usual, and took no time for lunch.

DANCING GIRLS BACK ON JOB FOR RULER

Play Prominent Role in India's Courts.

Washington, D. C.—That dancing girls play a prominent role in the courts of many rulers of India's native states, is indicated by recent reports from Jubbulpore, where Maharajah Zarawal agreed to increase the pay of his court dancers, thus ending a six months' strike and relieving him of embarrassment by the failure of these entertainers to perform at state ceremonies, says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Maharajah Zarawal is one of the scores of Indian princes who are real potentates in their native states, ruling with free hand except in cases of punishment for murder, which usually require confirmation by the British authorities. Fifteen of these states are included in the central provinces where Jubbulpore is located, therefore there are fifteen native potentates and fifteen royal courts.

Important Commercial Center.

"Commercially, Jubbulpore is one of the important inland cities of India," continues the bulletin. "The Great Indian Peninsula and East Indian railways meet here, linking the two largest cities of the Empire—
Bombay, 616 miles to the southwest and Calcutta, 780 miles almost due east. Branch lines of these railways, narrow-gauge railroads, and numerous trade routes radiate from Jubbulpore, causing a continuous flow of produce from the outlying districts
into the city for local consumption, milling, and shipment to the coast
for export to foreign markets.

"Wheat fields along these roads are unique. During the rainy season, the wheat-growing regions resemble a series of shallow lakes. Banks are built around the fields to retain the water which is not released until two weeks before the grain is sown. By this method the farmer has no need to flood; the cost of cultivating is decreased; and the success of the crops is not in danger of a drought,
since the ground holds sufficient moisture.

"Jubbulpore is a well laid out city with broad streets and numerous municipal gardens. Although it lies slightly farther north of the equator
than Tampico, Mexico, the cool climate makes it one of the most desirable cities in the central provinces, due to the fact that it is more than 1,300 feet above sea level.

"The Indian city is the second largest in the provinces, with a population slightly less than Canton, Ohio. This includes the British and native soldiers garrisoned there in a large cas-tament; for Jubbulpore is the headquarters of government military forces
in this district.

"Most of the working class of Jubbulpore's inhabitants are employed in spinning, weaving, and flour mills, and the shops of the Great Indian Peninsula railway. Others are occupied in local handicrafts, such as brass-working, stone-cutting, and the manufacture of images and ornaments of marble and agate. The prisoners in the provincial jail in Jubbulpore weave cloth and Scotch and Kidderminster carpets for sale.

Thugs Once Confined There.

"The Thugs, a religious band of assassins, and their descendants were confined in Jubbulpore, after they had terrorized all India for more than 700 years. They worshipped Kali, the Hindu goddess of destruction, and murder for gain was a religious duty.
They won the confidence of the well-
to-do wayfarer and sometimes accompanied or followed their intended victim hundreds of miles for the best opportunity to strangle him to death with a handkerchief. Then the mur-derer would perform rites in honor of the Thug deity, and set aside a portion of the spoils for her. Owing to the religious garb in which the Thugs shrouded their activities and their thorough secret organization, the Hindu and Mohammedan rulers of India were unable to suppress them. But the British finally succeeded, by a well-organized campaign, in rounding them up and unmasking their system."

Jobless Saxons Making

Flowers for Americans

Berlin, Germany.—The manufacture of artificial flowers and fruits for export to the United States is providing employment for about 12,000 men and women in Saxony. Otherwise they would be jobless, because of the slump in the textile and fur industry in which most of them were employed.
In Sebnitz alone there are 125 flower manufacturing concerns employing from 200 to 300 workers. In the last year the value of flowers and fruits exported has jumped from $2,500,000
to nearly $4,000,000.

Kills Deer With Arrow as

Rifleman Gets No Game

St. Cloud, Minn.—Hunting before white men came with gunpowder to dominate was recalled here when
H. C. Picket, a Pemberton merchant, exhibited a deer he killed with his bow and arrow. Picket, a hunter and woodman for 25 years, used a six-foot bow to bring down the animal, a 175-pound buck. His fourth arrow nearly penetrated the deer's body. Paradoxically, Picket's hunting companion, armed with a modern high-powered game rifle, failed to get a deer.

GERMAN BIBLE HELD SECRET FOR CENTURY

Cleveland Woman Expects
to Get Two Million Dollars
From An Old Will.

Two million dollars almost came to a Cleveland woman, Mrs. E. M. Dodds, thru the mute testimony of a seventeenth century German Bible.

Mrs. Dodds claims that the will was made in 1802 by Robert Anderson, of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania,
in which a $5,000 mortgage on Pittsburg real estate was bequeathed to his heirs.

She says that after Anderson signed the will he called for the old Bible which was in his hands when he was found dead a few minutes later. In the excitement attendant upon his death, she says, the old Bible was brushed aside and lost. More than a century later, it appeared as an heirloom in the family of Thomas D.
Treeble of Latrobe, Pennsylvania.

On the flyleaf was a cryptic inscription, "within these lids a rare secret lies," Mrs. Dodds says that for years members of the family scanned
the old German print for solution of the mystery. The secret was revealed when the ancient book fell from a shelf and the yellowed will of Robert Anderson tumbled out.

It was found that Treeble and his brothers were the sole heirs to the $5,000 mortgage on a 387 acre tract which has become valuable city real estate. Lawyers employed at the time discovered that the mortgage had been satisfied under the Pennsylvania
law of "presumptive satisfaction."

Treeble's daughter, Mrs. Dodds, 126 years after the will was signed, is planning to carry the case into the courts. If her fight is successful, the mortgage will be declared unsatisfied and she will collect the original $5000
plus interest compounded over a period of 126 years, which will total approximately $2,000,000.

Freddy Was Hungry

The minister had come home with the Browns for dinner. When they sat down to the meal Mr. Brown asked the guest to say grace. This he did.
However, the preacher spoke so softly that those at the table did not hear his whispered "Amen."

Freddy, though, had been watching the minister out of one corner of his eye, so when the family still sat with bowed heads after the grace was finished, Freddy exclaimed: "All heads
up and let's go to eatin'!"—Kansas

Relay Maps Route for World's Greatest Swim

The world's greatest swim for one of the greatest prizes ever hung up—$25,000 in cash—is to be staged in Southern California January 15 and thereafter until the swim is accomplished.

The swim is the Catalina channel. It separates the island of Catalina from the California mainland. The nearest distance is approximately twenty-three miles.

In the English channel the big problem was rough water and tides. In the Catalina channel an entirely new problem comes up. It is currents and change of temperature in the water.

Along the California shore the temperature is, as noted, 67 degrees. This is ideal for swimming. It is a factor that has made the California beaches the most popular in the world. But as one gets out a mile or so from shore the temperature starts downward. There is always a variable of eight degrees and frequently a greater variable. The shore temperature remains steadily at about 67 degrees and the channel temperature dropping to ten or even twelve degrees lower.

That the channel can be crossed by a swimmer has been demonstrated. Recently Fred Cady, coach at the Los Angeles athletic club, who has been a large factor in turning out crack California swimmers, crossed it with a relay of swimmers. The first in the water was Viola Hartman Cady, his wife. After she swam a mile, another swimmer entered. Temperatures were taken as the swimmers stroked across the water. They are shown. The journey with fourteen swimmers in the relay took 23 hours and seventeen minutes, and the zigzag course measured 33 miles. This is indicative of the difficulty of the swim. Trudy Ederle swam the English channel alone in fourteen and one half hours.

But then the English channel swimmers swam for glory. This swim is for $25,000. The effort to cross on January 15 will be enormous. Will it be done?

Spiritual Symbols Will Grace Floral Tourney

A new fame and a new glory is to be shed on Pasadena's famous Tournament of Roses on this coming New Year's day. This year the cities will send floats as before, but they will be expressive of a more spiritual side of life. Some will represent songs. Others will represent graces and abstractions such as beauty, idealism, courage, patriotism, faith, hope, charity and kindness.

The new note was given to the great day of flowers by Carrie Jacobs Bond, shown in the inset, and others of the famous creative artists of Southern California. They believed that in the twenty years of showing that the tourney had outgrown its primary inter-city competition. All of the cities tell in with the idea and this year will bring to their aid the ablest creative minds in the Southland in the fabrication of their entries.

As in the past all of the flowers used in the parade must be such as can be grown in Southern California at the New Year Season. These include roses of every description, carnations, sweet peas, calendulas, narcissus, bachelor buttons, larkspur, violets, marigolds, baby breath, heather, sunflowers, bougainvillea, geraniums, calla lilies, orange blossoms, shasta daisies, chrysanthemums, poinsettias, straw flowers, camellias, tulips, daffodils, poppies, California poppies, pansies, sweet alyssum, azaleas, dahlias, simlax, English ivy, asparagus, plumosa, evergreens (all varieties), hawthorne, holly, sage, dogberry and huckleberry.

Bird Named for Saint Peter

The bird petrel, says Time, is named for Saint Peter, who tried, through faith in Christ, to walk on the waters of Galilee. The petrels have webbed feet which they trail upon the sea's surface as they search for food, often actually "running" with assistance from their wings.

AMUSEMENTS

From "come-on" to caddy is the range covered by Eddie Cantor, ace of Broadway comedians in "Kid Boots," Paramount's comedy which opened at the Met theater last night.

The Florenz Ziefeld success, "Kid Boots," with Cantor as its star, ran for three years in New York, setting a high attendance mark by playing to more than a million people. It is safe to predict that Cantor's first film will also roll up new records for productions of this kind, and that it will also definitely establish Eddie as one of filmdom's best bets.

"Kid Boots" convulsed last night's audience with one laugh after another. It starts in an east side clothing store. Cantor is the "come-on" who forcibly lures customers in from the street.

Eddie finds himself enmeshed in a maze of difficulties when he "fits" Malcolm Waite, a husky swimming instructor, with a coat. Therefore, when Waite returns to get his money back—the fun begins. Then—the plot thickens as do the laughter and action. With the aid of Lawrence Gray, a rich young man endeavoring to escape a marriage into which he has been tricked, Cantor temporarily escapes from one predicament only to land in another.

Gray takes Cantor under his wing, and to hide from his unwanted wife, Natalie Kingston, they go to an exclusive golf club. Eddie, never having seen a golf ball in his life, furnishes some "top-hole" entertainment. Clara Bow and Billie Dove being at the same club the former promptly captures Eddie's heart while Gray capitulates to Billie. Waite objects to Eddie's attentions and—

The story concludes in rapid fashion with some of the funniest scenes ever filmed. Directed by Frank Tuttle, "Kid Boots" is one of the best comedies seen this season.

Creatures of the Wild

Apart from a few insects, no creature of the wild does any more work than is necessary to feed itself and its family. But appetites vary, and while an animal like the mole cannot go without food for more than three or four hours, and will starve to death in a single night, others, such as the python, feed but once in six or eight weeks.

Modern Charity

One of the most prevalent forms of charity seems to be the self-sacrifice exhibited by A. B. C and D in giving so much of their time at frequent meetings to plan what E, F, G and H ought to contribute.—The Outlook.

SAYS HOUSE-WORK IS GREAT NERVES CURE

Woman Tells Class in Hygiene Institute to Acquire Habit of Keeping Busy.

London, Dec. 23.—Take a hammer and drive nails, or grab a scrubbing brush and clean up the floor, or do any of the other thousand and one duties about a house and the matter of "nerves" will become something of the past, was the advice handed out by Dame Mary Scharlieb to a crowded house of women at the Institute of Hygiene.

"Household work is one of the greatest cures that women may take for 'nerves,'" continued Dr. Scharlieb who is dean of the British medical women and has been practicing here more than fifty years. "Neurotic girls and women can get the greatest advantage from work: work of any kind. The woman who stays at home is able to occupy herself in a variety of domestic tasks which are beneficial to mind and body alike."

MAY BE HABITABLE PLANETS GALORE

Scientist Points Out Possibility of Unseen Worlds.

New York.—There may be thousands of habitable worlds in the universe, said Prof. Henry Norris Russell, professor of astronomy at Princeton university, in a lecture in the American Museum of Natural History.

The only planet of which we know which may contain life is Mars, he said, because it is the only one on which the necessary conditions obtain. Within observation of those on the earth in inter-stellar space there may be planets unseen to those on earth which also hold some form of life.

Water, air and heat are necessary to maintain life, said Professor Russell, at least life as we know it.

"If this earth were taken away from the sun for a year the oceans would not only be frozen but the atmosphere would be condensed to liquid air washing on the rocks of a frozen sea," he said.

If all the worlds were considered to determine if there was life on them at least one billion would have to be examined, he said.

"The heavens are literally crammed with stars," he added, throwing on the screen a photograph of a portion of the sky to show the myriad worlds caught by the camera.

"Of those visible," he said, "not one single one is inhabitable. Why?—Because they are visible.

"That means that they are large and hot, that their heat is such as to be fatal to life.

"In such a region there is no hope of looking for life as we know it, but there might exist organized beings purely gaseous, but that sounds more like a ghost than anything we know."

Honors Even

The Paris correspondent of the London Morning Post was informed by the manager of the Geneva hotel where Briand and Stresemann dined after the last league assembly that when Herr Stresemann offered to pay for the dinner, M. Briand exclaimed: "Ah, no, no! I will settle for the wine and the dinner, my friend; you can pay the reparations."—From L'Ere Nouvelle, Paris. (Translated for the Kansas City Star).

Baby War Refugee Is Made Heiress
London. — Fourteen-year-old Marie Suzette Stevenson, a tiny Belgian refugee from the war-torn fields of Europe 12 years ago, is a British heiress as a result of that same war which spread misery and ruin across half of Europe.
Suzette was born in Belgium, where her father was an artisan. When the nations leaped at one another's throats, she was two years old. Her father went to the front and along with thousands of other refugees, Suzette was brought to England.
A fairy wand waved over the humdrum refugees' camp one day. Suzette was scarcely old enough to see it. Lord and Lady Stevenson stepped out of their limousine in search of a child to gladden their home. The wand pointed to flaxen-haired Suzette and she became their adopted daughter.
For three years Suzette had filled the Stevenson home with laughter. Lady Stevenson died in 1917. But at her deathbed, Lord Stevenson promised Suzette would never want for anything. The second Lady Stevenson, too, loved Suzette. A few months ago there came the death of Lord Stevenson, and his will, just made public, brings to Suzette a legacy of $125,000 which is all her very own.

DETROIT WORKER INHERITS LARGE AUSTRIAN ESTATE
Estranged From Parents Since 1911 He Arrives Home In Time to Save Property.
Detroit, Mich.—Estranged from his parents since 1911 over a trivial quarrel, Ernest Meuser, an Austrian mechanic, who has made his home here since that time, returned to his former home in St. Polten bei Wien, near Vienna, last month just in time to claim the valuable estate of his father, which would have passed into the hands of a distant relative at the end of this year.
Details of the death of his parents while he was in America and information regarding the estate reached here recently in a letter received by Meuser's American wife, who indirectly was the cause of his return to Austria.
The quarrel that caused young Meuser to leave his home at the age of eighteen was an inconsequential matter, Mrs. Meuser said, but the young man took it deeply to heart and never corresponded with his parents. Four years ago he married. During the last year or two his health failed. Mrs. Meuser believed her husband's ill health was caused by his worrying over his estrangement from his parents and some weeks ago, unknown to him, she wrote to his mother.
It was returned to the Vienna post office marked "Addressee dead," and was opened by the postal authorities. From it the Austrian authorities learned of Meuser's address here and they wrote to him telling him that his father had died soon after the World war and his mother about two years ago.
By his mother's will, all the property, consisting of valuable manufacturing plants, was left to a distant relative unless the son claimed it before the end of the present year. On receipt of this information, Meuser at once left for Austria and arrived at St. Polten the end of last month, in time to establish his identity and claim the estates.
Mrs. Meuser is arranging to join her husband in Austria.

Rich Mother of 3 at 65 Weds Driver, 21
South Deerfield, Mass.—Mrs. Stella Woodward, sixty-five-year-old wealthy widow, and mother of three grown children, has married Herman T. Letourneau, her twenty-one-year-old chauffeur. The couple eloped to Kingston, N. Y., where they were wed in a Baptist church on October 6, Letourneau just announced.
He declared that although he had driven the Woodward car for six months he had known Mrs. Woodward several years. "I am not a hired chauffeur," he was quoted as explaining. "I am a man of leisure." Mrs. Woodward's husband, Joe Woodward, a wealthy retired business man of this town, died two years ago. The bride is a cousin of Mrs. Arthur Curtis James, wife of the financier and yachtsman.

Famous "Big Ben" Cracked, Radio Fans Detect Flaw
London, England—Big Ben is cracked. Most all radio fans who have heard on their sets the clock strike the hours from the Westminster tower thought there was a flaw in the bell and this is confirmed by W. Boughton of the Ancient College of Youths, England's oldest bellringing fraternity.
He says professional bell ringers agree that Big Ben is so cracked "that you can stick your arm through the fracture."

SWORDFISH SEASON NOW OPEN IN HAWAIIAN WATERS
One Honolulu Realtor Recently Brought In 250-Pounder On Regulation Tackle.

Honolulu, Dec. 26.—This is swordfish season in Hawaiian waters. Warm, clear days and crisp, cloudless nights with scarcely a breeze stirring, give the islands at this time of year a touch of weather closely akin to "Indian summer" on the mainland. The sea becomes unusually quiet, whitecaps disappear, and the surface takes on a glassy appearance disturbed only at long intervals by slow moving ground swells. At such periods the swordfish come to the surface after small fish. Off the Kona district, Island of Hawaii, some splendid catches have been reported. Charles R. Frazier, a Honolulu realtor, brought in a 250-pounder on regulation tackle recently in Kona waters. In the channel between Oahu and Kauai islands, the big fish appear to be especially numerous and the commercial fishermen, notably the Japanese, are making big hauls. One afternoon during the past week a Japanese sampan brought in two big fish, one weighing 520 pounds and the other 635. These were not taken on regulation tackle, but they have given local sportsmen a decided yearning to go out into the channel and see what can be done with split bamboo pole and 24-thread line.

PENSION IS DECLINED
By Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, Widow of Former Vice President.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall does not desire the $5,000 annual pension which Congress has been asked to grant the widow of the former Vice President.
Mrs. Marshall has written to Representative Richard S. Aldrich, Rhode Island, Republican, requesting him to withdraw his bill which seeks to give the annuity to her.
Informing Harold Knutson, Chairman of the House Pensions Committee, of Mrs. Marshall's wishes, Aldrich said the sale of the late Vice President's memoirs had exceeded all expectations and that the revenue derived therefrom was so substantial that she does not feel justified in accepting a pension.
It has been customary to grant pensions to widows of former presidents. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt receives annually $5,000. President Cleveland's widow also receives that amount. A bill to grant $5,000 a year to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has been introduced, but no action has been taken.

BABE RUTH
Is Sitting On Top of the World In Base Ball Circles.

By Henry L. Farrell.
United Press Staff Correspondent
New York, Dec. 23.—Babe Ruth, the prodigal boy of base ball who has been disciplined and fined several times for violation of training rules and other minor human frailties, is sitting on the top of the base ball world.
Ruth has been a national hero since he started socking the home runs that distracted the attention of the fans following the 1919 world series.
And therein is the spot that has been arranged for the Babe. Ruth is not under contract now. The three-year-old document which forced the New York Yankees to pay his $52,000 a year has expired and he will have to sign a new contract before he can play next season.

Another Year

It is a rare occurrence for one concern to receive the hearty and continued support of a community for a period of 33 years.

You will pardon, if it is with a tinge of pride that we recognize this fact; and yet, it is in all sincerity and in all humility that we again wish to thank you for this confidence—assuring you of our purpose to continue to serve you as well; and, if possible, better than in the years that have gone by.

And for you, may the attainment of an added goal be your joyful reward when hoary "Time" shall again have sounded "Taps" for 1927.

Long Labor Unfinished

Pierre de Ronsard of the Sixteenth century was the father of lyric poetry in France. To be a second Homer he undertook a long epic poem, which he worked on for twenty-five years, and left unfinished.

Composition of Brain

In some places the layer of gray matter which composes the brain is a quarter of an inch thick, while in the thinner parts it is but one-tenth of an inch thick.

His Winning Stenographer

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

"I DON'T mind telling you," confessed young Jimmy Dawson to his friend Charley Underwood, as they smoked their post-lunch cigars in the Belmont grill, "that Lesbia Carroll is just about all the brains in our firm. That girl's a marvel!"

"She's an easy creature to look at, also," replied Charley. "I've known her for years."

"Righto!" Then Dawson frowned. "There's something worrying me. The little simpleton has entered this fool contest for the world's best-looking and speediest typist, and I'm scared silly she'll win."

"If she did," finished Charley, "she'd be snapped up by 'movie' men and the firm would lose its brains."

"You've said it," returned his friend gloomily. "But worse even than that, the girl would be utterly spoiled."

"Pardon my inquiry, but have you—er—any personal interest in that matter?" asked Charley gently.

"Certainly not!" retorted the other with apparent sincerity. "Pure altruism alone incites me. If I could think of some scheme by which she could be kept from entering the finals, I would not hesitate to save her from herself."

"You'd stop at nothing?"

"Well, almost nothing."

"I've got it, then!" and Charley slapped his knee. "You say your sister is at her place on Long Island? Well, listen, here!"

An hour later, Lesbia Carroll looked up from her desk to see her employer striding towards her with an expression of determination on his face.

Looking down into her blue eyes, "Are you still set on being in that contest?" he demanded.

Lesbia tossed her curly bobbed head. "Certainly," she said. "Why not?"

Now young Jimmy had not been altogether sincere about his interest in Lesbia. In spite of himself, it was fast growing personal, but he would not recognize it if Lesbia persisted in advertising herself throughout the country.

Therefore, he now hedged somewhat in his reply. "There are many reasons, Miss Carroll. You are bound to lose interest in your work with us. And—and—oh, hang it—"

Lesbia flushed. "Please, Mr. Dawson. Please!"

"It's no use," he presently telephoned Charley. "She will go into the thing and with her looks and speed, she's bound to win. I'll get hold of my sister—lucky they used to be old friends in school—and we'll carry out that little plan. Means I've got to get in a substitute here, but it's worth the trouble. It's up to you to see that your arrival with Lesbia is quite too late for the final contest."

Now to do Jimmy's sister justice, she was not informed as to just why Lesbia was sent to her for a week-end visit other than that Jimmy thought she needed a rest. But because she had been asked to include Jimmy's old friend, Charley Underwood, in the house party, she suspected a love affair and managed to throw them into each other's company as much as possible.

Therefore, upon that poor man fell the duty of playing Machiavelli at the same time that he was supposed to be enacting the role of an ardent Romeo. And it was probably not the first time that a well-meaning friend cursed his well-meaning friendship for precipitating him into unseen difficulties.

On the morning when the final contest was to be held, Jimmy Dawson's cruiser swung slowly up the East river.

Her owner was pacing the dock at which she was to land, and now and then he glanced nervously at his watch, while a few yards away, a taxicab with its engine still running, quivered on the cobblestones.

As the boat drew near, Jimmy went over to the top of the ladder which led down to the boat and, as Lesbia started up, he reached down and grabbed her arm. "Hurry, Lesbia," he cried. "The contest was postponed until eleven, but we've only about fifteen—no, thirteen minutes, in which to make it. Hurry!"

But Lesbia seemed in no great haste, while Charley, now on the scene, was regarding Jimmy with an expression decidedly curious.

"Hurry," said Jimmy. "Only twelve minutes!"

"But I'm not going to enter!" cried Lesbia. "I know that Charley, for some reason or other, doesn't want me to. Ever since we left your sister's, he has been inventing delays and imagining that one thing after another was wrong with the boat. We've stopped twenty times on the way!" Then she slipped an arm through Charley's. "Mr.—er—Dawson, Charley and I—"

"Sorry, old man," said Charley. "You see—we've gone and fallen in love and now she's won me, she doesn't seem to care about winning anything else!" Jimmy grabbed their hands. "Congratulations!" he said, and there was no doubting his sincerity.

But later when the two men were alone, Charley could not refrain from just one question. "How come, Jimmy, you made such a right-about-face about Lesbia's going in for that affair?"

Jimmy looked sheepish. "I—I sort of lost interest in what she did," he confessed. "And I didn't want it on my conscience that I'd stood in her way. I—I say, Charley, you ought to see the girl who's taking her place! Gloria, her name is—and, gosh, she's got brains, too!"
